Engagement of Interest.
An engagement of interest announced during the week is that of Miss Marguerite Barbour, daughter of Mrs. James F. Barbour, to Mr. George Lewis Mayer of Philadelphia, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and member of many of the Quaker city's exclusive clubs.

Of interest to Washington is the date set for the marriage of Dr. Cary Grayson, U. S. N., the President's aid and familiar friend, and Miss Alice Gertrude Gordon, which the bride has named as May 24, the marriage to be performed at St. George Episcopal Church in New York, with the President and Mrs. Wilson in all probability as witnesses, as President and Mrs. Wilson will have by that time returned from the trip they have just made to Charlotte, N. C., on which trip they were accompanied by the prospective bridegroom.

A note of sadness was cast over Washington social circles by the death Wednesday of Mrs. Emily MacVeagh, wife of Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury in President Taft's cabinet.
She has been ill for some time here at her home on 18th street, where she died, and her death is mourned by many persons, not only in her own circle of friends, but by many in more lowly ranks of the capital, where she has long been known as a woman of charity and benevolence.

Cabinet Families.

The Secretary of State is taking a much needed rest, remaining at his home on 18th street, and he and Mrs. Lansing will not likely make any new social engagements for the present.
Mrs. Arthur Duller, who was the guest of Gen. and Mrs. Foster, and Mr. and Mrs. Lansing, has returned to her home in New York.
The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. McAdoo have gone to their home on R street, after an absence from there of several months. They went to the White House on their return from a visit to the Latin American countries, because the Secretary's grandchildren, the children of his widowed daughter, Mrs. Martin, had measles. The children are convalescing, but are not sufficiently well for little Ellen Wilson McAdoo to join them there. She still reigns supreme as the guest of the President and Mrs. Wilson at the White House.

Secretary went to attend the Mecklenburg celebration, and Mrs. Daniels has spent a week and more in visiting from place to place.
Mrs. Charles K. Drury will join her parents, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Redfield, at their home on Massachusetts avenue, Tuesday, after a visit to her brother at Amherst College, where he will graduate this year.

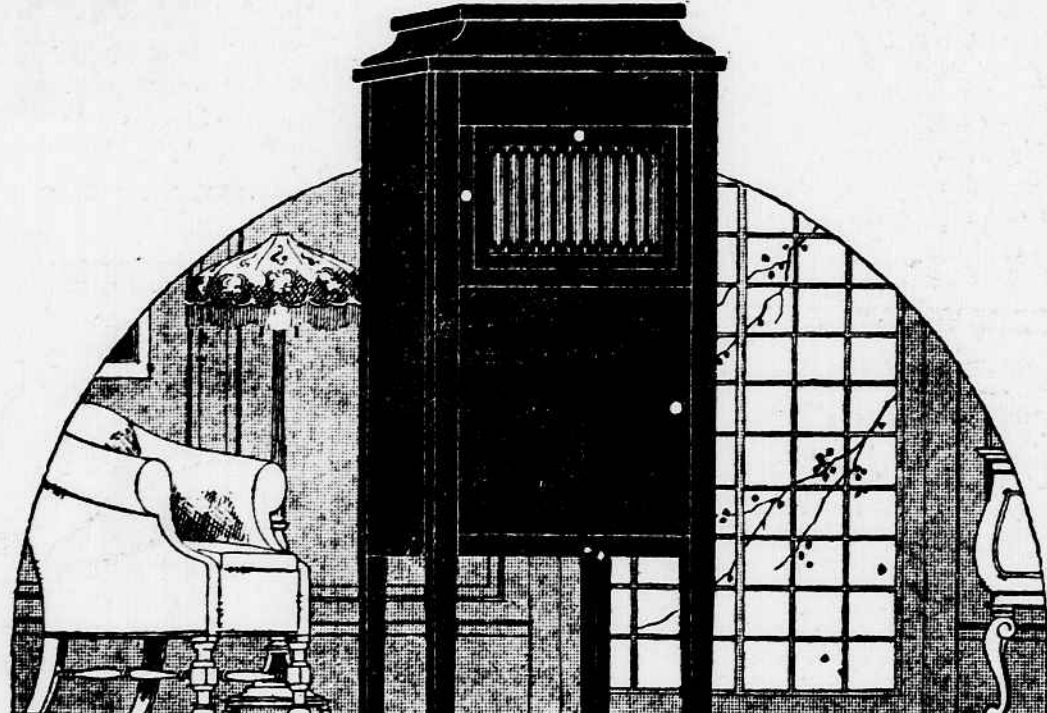

Day at Home.

Mrs. M. Campbell Oliphant will be at home the last two Wednesdays in May at Langdon, Drummond, Md., from 4 to 7.

Chief Justice a Host.

The Chief Justice and Mrs. Edward Douglas White entertained a large dinner party last night at the Country Club.

AEOLIAN-VOCALION

STYLE G $100

THE Aeolian Company desires to draw attention to the model of the Aeolian-Vocalion illustrated above. Since its introduction little more than a year ago, the Aeolian-Vocalion has attained an extraordinary measure of popularity and prestige. The recognition of its musical and artistic supremacy, however, has been taken, sometimes, to imply a high price.

Its Art Styles are necessarily high in price. But in the conventional models, Aeolian-Vocalions cost no more than phonographs of the ordinary type and may be as conveniently purchased. This is illustrated in the model shown above, known as Style G, which costs but $100.

Every important and distinctive "Vocalin" feature is represented in this model. Its case, like those of all other models, is distinguished by simple elegance of outline and richness of finish.

And, most important of all, it contains the Revolutionary Graduola—the wonderful throat-like device—that makes artistic, note-by-note modulation of phonograph tone at last an actual accomplishment.

Aeolian-Vocalions cost from $35 to $2,000. Conventional Models, $35 to $75, without Graduola; $100 to $350 with Graduola; Art Styles, $375 upward.

CHARACTER and interest have been given to the week just past by a diversity of social activities, chief among them being the annual Dolly Madison breakfast, the yearly visit of the regents of the Mount Vernon Association to the shrine of their patriotic endeavors and several charming weddings, with the usual list of dinners and luncheons bringing up the rear.

The presence at the breakfast of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the President's bride, as an honor guest for the first time added interest to the occasion, which brought together a large and representative gathering of official and non-official women to break the proverbial bread together and incidentally to be entertained by various remarks by women of prominence. Mrs. Champ Clark's prophecy acent "the mistress of the White House a hundred years hence" was particularly well received, though all present were unanimous in the opinion that the lady of the future could not look one whit more charming nor hold a higher place in the esteem of all than the present mistress of the old mansion, whose gray taffeta gown, softened by trimming of tulle, and big picture hat of hemp and maline, with ostrich tips of the same delicate shade, became her admirably.

Mount Vernon Visit Interesting.
While the members of the Woman's Democratic League interested in the political fortunes of the country, especially as they touch on this administration, have been absorbed in preparation as well as participation in their annual gathering, those who compose the Mount Vernon Association, and whose interests may be said to hark back to the early political days of the country, when the first President made his home on the beautiful knoll overlooking the Potomac, have been paying an unusual interesting visit to Mount Vernon. With all barriers down, the guards for the time dismissed, they have lived there in a manner as nearly like that maintained by the first President as the prosaic facts of this day coupled with their imagination would admit. They have been doing in fact what the French writer, Henri de Regnier, writing in a recent number of "Les Politiques at Litteraires" wished to do in fancy, when he wrote: "Take away the wooden barrier that prevents access to the rooms. Send away the guards; remake the necessary solitude; give back to the house its discreet and familiar notes; imagine voices speaking in these high-ceilinged rooms; a door softly closed; a step on the stair; and behold the living shadow of the house as it once was evoked, as it was, when in those beautiful hours, full of wise and just thoughts, Washington, doubtless, came to sit on that veranda, looking before him at the flowing waters of the Potomac."
A tea party to which the ladies of the association were invited on Thursday at Gunston Hall, the old home of George Mason, the dear and intimate friend of Gen. Washington, did but enhance the suggestive of old-time days.

Two Picturesque Weddings.
Of the weddings of the week those of Miss Barbara Kauffmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Kauffmann, and Mr. Lewis Newton Murray of Dunbar, N. Y., and Miss Sara Hayward, daughter of the military attaché of the Argentine embassy, and Mr. Abel V. Ezeiza of Argentina, both of which took place yesterday, were in point of general interest the most noted as they were the most picturesque.
The first had for its setting the rolling lawn, crowned by stately trees, at Another Nuptial Event.

Another nuptial event of interest this past week was that of Miss Helen Buchanan, daughter of Gen. James A. Buchanan, U. S. A., and Mr. Walter McKinnon Jones, formerly of Boston, but now of Porto Rico, the ceremony being performed by the rector of St. John's Church before a small party of friends and relatives.
The bride, who ever since her coming out has been one of the most popular young women in Washington society, also carries a reputation for horsemanship unequalled, or rather unexcelled, by any other young woman in
